Certifications

Responsible products are increasingly valued. The products in this catalogue include features such as ‘recycled’ and ‘upcycled’. These features are supported by globally recognised sustainability certifications.

Certified by Control Union
CU 1196704

GRS - Global Recycled Standard

Products certified to the Global Recycled Standard (GRS) contain recycled content that has been (independently) verified at each stage of the supply chain, from the source to the final product. In addition, certified organizations have met social, environmental, and chemical requirements. The purchase of Global Recycled Standard (GRS) certified products demonstrates demand for recycled content and best processing practices in the supply chain.

FSC® - Forest Stewardship Council

FSC® stands for Forest Stewardship Council, a voluntary certification that demonstrates that the wood and bamboo used for our products come from sustainable and responsible forest management. Forests are verified and certified by an independent party and products from these forests can be sold as FSC®-certified. Every chain in the supply chain of these products must be certified. This way we can be sure that the products are in fact from sustainable forest management.

Certified by Control Union
CU 1196704

RCS - Recycled Claim Standard

Products certified to the Recycled Claim Standard (RCS) contain recycled content that has been (independently) verified at each stage of the supply chain, from the source to the final product. The purchase of Recycled Claim Standard (RCS) certified products demonstrates demand for recycled content. Products certified to the Recycled Claim Standard 100 (RCS 100) contain at least 95% certified recycled content. Products certified to the Recycled Claim Standard Blended (RCS Blended) contain between 5-94% certified recycled content.

Certified by Control Union
CU 1196704

GOTS - Global Organic Textile Standard

This standard is international and voluntary and sets requirements for third-party certification of organically grown material, Chain of Custody, social and environmental practices and chemical restrictions. It is an internationally recognized certification standard for textiles, clothing and fibres made from organically produced natural fibres. Products that meet the GOTS standard are recognized as organically and sustainably produced.

B Corp

This catalogue contains products from companies that are B Corp certified. B Corp represents a certification standard that assesses the full social and environmental impact of a brand. Discover the brands that have a B Corp certification:

Overview of materials

Waste material

Waste as the basis for new business gifts

Coffee grounds, apple pulp, and recycled milk cartons are given a second life as materials for new products. For instance, coffee grounds can be used to produce reusable drinking cups, while apple pulp serves as the basis for stylish laptop sleeves, for example. Used milk cartons are processed into practical notebooks. This reuse process shows how leftover materials gain new value, finding meaningful application in everyday products.

Recycled material

A second life for used products

tRecycled material plays an important role in reducing waste and saving resources. Materials such as plastic bottles and old textiles are processed and transformed into new products, such as RPET items, bags and towels. This process helps reduce waste and promotes a circular economy, where resources go through multiple life cycles before being replaced.

Natural material

The power of natural materials

tNatural and bio-based materials are increasingly used as alternatives to traditional plastics. Examples include organic cotton, bamboo, cork, and jute, which are found in products like bags, cutting boards, and kitchen accessories. Additionally, bio-based materials made from starch, sugars, and cellulose, as well as agricultural and organic waste like corn or sugarcane remnants, are used. These materials offer a more sustainable alternative to non-renewable resources.

Recycled stainless steel

Recycled stainless steel (SS) is stainless steel made from recycled metals, usually from old stainless-steel products, such as kitchenware and appliances. A recycling process allows these valuable materials to be reused, reducing the need for new raw materials.
Products made from recycled stainless steel have a long lifespan. They are hygienic, easy to clean and resistant to corrosion, making them ideal for everyday use.

Recycled ABS

Recycled ABS is a material produced by collecting and processing used ABS plastic products. ABS is found in products such as toys, electronics and car parts. Recycled ABS is produced by sorting and cleaning used ABS products, melting them and transforming them into new products.

Recycled aluminium

Recycled aluminium is made from used aluminium products such as soft drink cans or aluminium packaging. Instead of mining and processing new aluminium ore, these old aluminium products are collected and remelted to create new aluminium products. By using recycled aluminium, fewer new raw materials are used.

Recycled milk cartons

Recycled milk cartons are a valuable source of new products. Milk packaging material consists of aluminium, paper and plastic, which are carefully separated, sorted and processed by machines. The remaining paper is made into notebooks and other functional items, among others. Products with a special past, ready for a second life.

Recycled glass

Bottles that are placed in to recycling are firstly broken down and washed. This material is then melted down into recycled glass to make new bottles or other functional glass products. When this new product is eventually placed in to recycling, the process starts all over again.

Recycled cotton

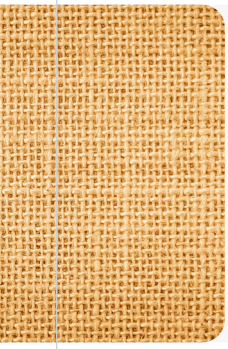
Cotton can be recycled from textile waste from the textile industry (pre-consumer) or from discarded consumer textiles (post-consumer). In this process, different raw materials are often combined. Worn textiles are carefully sorted and stripped of buttons, zips and labels. The fibres are then machine combed until only the pure fibres remain. These are mixed with a small percentage of virgin, organic cotton or polyester and from these, strong yarns are spun.

RPET

RPET stands for Recycled Polyethylene Terephthalate, a material made from recycled PET plastic, such as plastic bottles and packaging. This process starts by collecting and separating plastic waste, which is then carefully cleaned and shredded into small plastic particles. These particles are then converted into granulate, which can be re-formed into products via injection moulding or other production methods. RPET is indistinguishable from 'regular' plastic. RPET reduces the demand for new plastic and thus contributes to reducing plastic waste.

Hemp

The hemp plant naturally produces exceptionally strong fibres, which have been used in textiles for centuries for their strength and versatility. Thanks to its rapid growth and deep root system, hemp supports soil health and helps purify pollutants. Hemp requires up to 35% less water than cotton and can grow without pesticides due to its natural resistance to insects. This allows it to be grown organically. Fabric made from hemp feels soft and warm and retains its quality even after frequent washing. Hemp offers a reliable, natural base for reusable bags.

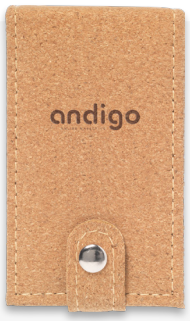


Jute

Jute is a long, soft, plant bast fibre that can be spun into rough, strong threads. Plant material that is 100% biodegradable. Very little fertiliser and pesticides are used to grow jute. This makes it a good alternative to cotton and nylon. Jute gives products a cool and robust appearance. As it is a strong, hard-wearing and tough material, it is ideally suited as a basis for making shopping bags.

Coffee waste

Coffee grounds are a valuable raw material that can be reused in various ways. Coffee grounds are mainly collected from the catering industry. Coffee grounds can serve as a basis for paper production by adding cellulose. Coffee grounds can also be processed into granulate suitable for making plastic. With some additional ingredients and processing, coffee grounds eventually create the basis for materials such as paper, plastic and yarn, which can be further processed into all kinds of functional products. A nice bonus is that products made from coffee waste, often still smell like coffee.



Cork

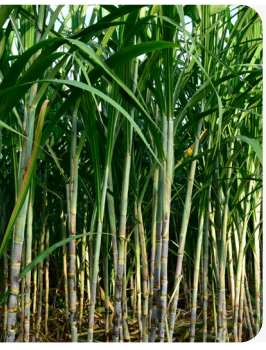
Cork is back with a vengeance. It is made from the bark of the cork oak tree and is fully biodegradable and easy to recycle. In addition, cork is light, soft and versatile. It is easy to process into beautiful promotional products. The use of cork gives products a strikingly beautiful and warm appearance.

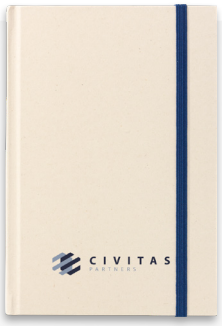
Organic cotton

Cotton is breathable, light and mostly affordable. Organic cotton is grown without artificial fertilisers and synthetic pesticides. More rainwater and less irrigated water is used for cultivation, and the plant grows at a natural rate. This results in strong, soft fibres suitable for long-term use.
Organic cotton typically has a lower impact on the environment and supports a more natural approach to cotton production. This makes it a great basis for conveying a promotional message.

Bamboo

Bamboo is strong, fully degradable and visually appealing. Bamboo can grow up to a metre a day and requires no pesticides or herbicides to thrive, making it an efficient and low-threshold plant for renewable production. Harvesting bamboo does not require replanting, as the plant's roots remain in place and continue to produce new shoots. Bamboo is naturally antibacterial and easy to clean. Pure nature; therefore, each bamboo product has its own unique colour. A beautiful basis for functional products.





Sugar cane waste

Sugar cane belongs to the grass family and is a fast-growing crop. After harvesting and producing sugars, leaves and stems remain as residual products. Instead of burning this waste, these remnants are now used as raw material for bio-plastics. Sugarcane removes CO2 from the air while growing and is highly resistant to disease and drought, reducing the resources needed to maintain the plant. This makes sugarcane an excellent choice for producing innovative, hard-wearing materials.

Bambook

Write, scan, erase, repeat

Discover the new way to write without wasting paper. Together, switch from single-use paper to erasable notebooks. Because reusing and saving becomes the new norm: that's what we're going for. You can therefore endlessly rewrite your Bambook. No more stuffed bins, or papers lying around but everything in one convenient place.

Together, we draw a line under piles of paper waste, deforestation and wasted resources. The books are made by hand in the Netherlands.

Bambook is B Corp-certified; the collection is produced to the highest ecological and social standards of B Corp.
